Arkadium Reels In Two More Prestigious Awards

Communicator Awards and the The Stevie's American Business Awards honor leading casual game developer for excellence in game creation and executive leadership

New York – June 24, 2009 – Arkadium, a leading casual games developer, today announced that the company has been honored with two prestigious awards. The Communicator Awards honored Arkadium for its work on the National Geographic EXPEDITION game with the ‘Award of Excellence,’ and the company’s president, Jessica Rovello, received the prestigious Stevie’s American Business Award for ‘Executive of the Year in Media & Entertainment.’ This is the second year in a row that Jessica has been honored by the Stevie’s for her executive leadership skills.

The Communicator Awards are judged and overseen by the International Academy of the Visual Arts (IAVA), a 450+ member organization of leading professionals from various disciplines of the visual arts dedicated to embracing progress and the evolving nature of traditional and interactive media. The Stevie’s American Business Awards honor the leading figures in American businesses worldwide, and this year more than 2,600 entries were submitted for more than 40 categories.

“These awards are shared by everyone at Arkadium and the entire team is extremely proud of our accomplishments,” said Jessica Rovello, president of Arkadium. “Being honored for our expertise in game development is an incredible achievement, and receiving an award for leadership is something that I share with everyone I interact with at Arkadium.”
